

March Royal Writer

March is our month to celebrate our family heritage with our Family Heritage Night on the 13th. What better way to share our heritage than through our foods. The March Royal Writer Challenge will be divided into two parts. The first part is for FIRST, SECOND, and THIRD grades. Use the attached recipe template to write down a favorite family recipe that you are willing to share. Make sure you include all the ingredients and steps to inform others how to create this special treat. Check for spelling, capitalization, and punctuation before you turn it in.

The second part is for FOURTH and FIFTH grades. You are challenged to write a how-to essay about how to create a favorite family food. Remember that essays need to have three parts, an introduction, a body and a conclusion. Your essay should have at least three paragraphs or five if you split the body section into three parts. Use the first paragraph to introduce us to your food. Did it come from your grandma or further back? Do you eat it at special times of the year? The body section should explain in great detail how to create this food. Use sequence words like first, next, then, and finally. Your conclusion should sum up your thoughts about this food. Will the readers enjoy it? Will you pass it on to future generations? What do you want your readers to remember about this topic? Check for spelling, punctuation, and capitalization before you turn it in.

Due Date: March 27, 2019
