Supporting Students with Special Needs in a Virtual Environment

With many schools moving to a virtual learning environment, many of our students who need specially designed instruction and accommodation in the regular education classroom are the ones who struggle the most. Many students with learning support needs and executive functioning deficits struggle to stay engaged in the classroom, stay organized, and make academic progress. This workshop will look at tips and tools that can help parents to support students with learning support needs to promote success in their general education classes while learning remotely.
